Giving new meaning to the phrase "getting down with your bad self," Richard Griffin's exploitation extravaganza THE DISCO EXORCIST is available today on unrated DVD. Read on for the details, where to buy it and a new photo.

Griffin's Scorpio Film Releasing has the disc available for purchase via Amazon.com for $20 plus $2.98 shipping. THE DISCO EXORCIST (track back through our previous coverage starting here) stars Michael Reed as Rex Romanski, a disco king whose womanizing ways put him at the center of a love (er, sex really) triangle between two women, one of whom curses the other to become possessed by a demon. Sarah Nicklin, Ruth Sullivan, Brandon Luis Aponte, Rich Tretheway and Gio Castellano co-star; Tony Nunes scripted. "After several highly successful theatrical screenings of THE DISCO EXORCIST, I am overjoyed that audience members can now watch all the sex, violence and nudity from the comfort of their own homes," Griffin tells Fango. "We made this movie to be a loving tribute to sleaze films of days gone by, and I know when people watch THE DISCO EXORCIST, they'll see we truly delivered the grindhouse groceries!"

Special features on the DVD are:

- Audio commentary by Griffin, producer Ted Marr and stars Nicklin and Reed
- Deleted scene
- Trailer
