

HORRORNEWS.NET

CONNECT

HORRORNEWS.NET

ADVERTISE YOUR RELEASE

Contact HorrorNews.Net? news@horrornews.net

Film Review: The Photographer (2011)

Posted on 04/04/2012 by Zman Leave a Comment or Post Review

SYNOPSIS:

An ambitious young model, in a dead-end town, accepts an invitation for a glamor eccentric photographer. As soon as she arrives at the secluded location, she realizes she's wrong.

Well folks, I think I may have just found the perfect alternative to taking sleeping trouble sleeping, either night or day, try watching “The Photographer”. I want to know the events that unfold within and that my dislike of the film is way off base. The film took me forever to get through it. I had to rewind it three times just to make it to the hell was going on half the time. I’m sure that there is some sort of audience (I can tell you that without a shadow of doubt, I am not that audience. Nor will I ever be) churning out the films rather quickly so I won’t question their audience. They can’t think I can handle watching them. I’ll give them a little break, I did like their work could you dislike a film where the lead is naked 90% of the runtime. With “The Photographer” draw a line somewhere. I gave it a chance, just wasn’t for me.

The film opens with a young model enjoying a pleasant photo shoot. Later on she has to do a glamor shoot with a bizarre young photographer, who is doing his best to be a quiet female assistant. She does everything that she is asked before things start to go wrong. They are waiting for her outside in their car. They seem to doze off but when they awake, they are in a dark place and have no clue how they got there. The two girls are tied up in the middle of the night and the photographer snaps away. We quickly learn that nothing is what it seems and th

Because I fell asleep so much while watching it, I'm not even sure that I am giving many of you can relate to the feeling you get when you just know that you don't let go and never lets up. The acting is amateurish and nothing really happens. In the end, it rears its head to excite the palate. There is a pinch of female nudity and the ladies guess there is something to enjoy, if only for just a brief moment.

Scenes just go on and on when nothing is being said. The camera doesn't move, it just walks back and forth, pours a drink, takes a bath, etc. If you cut all the fluff out of the

I really wish that I had more positive to say about “The Photographer”, I just don't know how the crew that worked hard to do this. That I have to admire though I'm sorry to say that I'm not sure that Chemical Burn's devoted followers will really enjoy this outing. Maybe it's just me and myself which is fine too. For me, it was a complete waste of time. All I can do is mess. And the only reason I am giving it that is because I was able to see a bit of light and grasping for straws with this one.

The Photographer (2011)

Other Cool Articles:

Film Review: The Barn (short film) (2011)

'FRANKENWEENIE' Rises from the Grave, Again?

Film Review: Cam Girl (2010)

The Phantom of the Opera - Giveaway!

Film Review: A Cold Day in Hell (2011)

Related Posts

CONNECT

■ No Related Post

This entry was posted in Film Reviews and tagged anthony brems, kate lee, kitty griffiths, maria lee metheringham, The Photographer permalink.

---

About Zman

Z-Man has been with HorrorNews since 2009. He is a self-proclaimed geek with an appetite for the b
View all posts by Zman →

If you like following our Horror News make sure to subscribe to the RSS Feed!