Documentary made from one faithful fan of George A. Romero visiting the various locations that Night of the Living Dead 1968 and 1990, Creepshow, Day of the Dead and Dawn of the Dead (aka Zombie) were filmed at.

Takes a little bit adjusting to since the person making this speaks mostly French and then a narrator comes on speaking English above him. Never really raises above being a home movie that just happened to get distribution. Still, being able to visit the locations that these classic films were made at and seeing some of the stars of these films in present day living is a real treat. More insight from the stars and people who were involved in getting the locations for these films set would have been appreciated. A must for completists of George A. Romero's work.
