Ana Popovic \(1\) was an artist whom I had never heard of. However when I recently came across a DVD of hers entitled Ana Popovic Band An Evening at Trasimeno Lake Live from the Heart of Italy, I figured I'd give it a listen. From the looks of Ana Popovic's bio \(2\) from Ruf Records, one would think that you'd come across the next blues Messiah. She is fairly talented, but on this live DVD her talent's goes in fits and starts. She appears an old soul, well worn beyond her years, but it's a mixed bag on this live DVD.

Popovic and company begin the event with an explosive guitar intro and the vengeful track "Wrong Woman." For all the praise she'd gotten for being "fresh, positive, and genre-expanding," this tune sounded like a classic 'wronged-lover' song. It was good but didn't sound like something I hadn't heard before.

The audience appeared to be mere feet from the ground level stage. The white light from the stagelights revealed gnats flying around all over the performers spaces. The keyboard player seemed more than once to be bothered by gnats flying into his eyes.

The second song in her set; "Is This Everything There Is" was a slow build of a song. It reached its apex around Popovic's almost heavy metal twangy sounding, high-pitched solo. From this tune it sounded like Popovic could be looking to play lead in a hair metal band.

In a fun turn, Popovic really shows her rugged attitude in "Why You Wanna Do Me Like That" where she sings "My daddy was a preacher but my momma was an alley cat."

"U Complete Me," takes the tempo back a bit. The song started out with a slow guitar and drum bluesy two-step and screeching organs. When the first chorus the drums kicked back in and Popovic's wailing was not lost to the end.
