

music report | BY KEVIN WIERZBICKI

Here Come the Throttleheads!

Aggronautix is set to introduce a series of “anti-bobblehead” collectible figures beginning with the likenesses of infamous punk figures G.G. Allin and Meatmen frontman Tesco Vee. The figures are called Throttleheads, and they’re made of a lightweight polyresin, stand seven-inches tall and come packaged in a tri-windowed box.

The outrageous Allin died of a drug overdose in 1993, but Tesco Vee is alive and active and says he loves the Aggronautix tribute.

“As a toy collector of two decades and a classic bobblehead collector, imagine how geeked I became when informed that yours truly would enter the pantheon of Throttlehead punk rock losers along with poopy soulmate G.G. Allin!”

Both figures are numbered limited editions and can be found at tattoo parlors, comic shops and various other indie retailers or online at aggronautix.com. Next up in the series will be a special two-headed Dwarves Throttle.