"Dying Inside' by Down The Drain"

Sometimes a side-project is as good, or better than the band from which it is spawned. Such is the case with Down The Drain, featuring Brett Hoffmann of the mighty Malevolent Creation. Down The Drain's 2007 opus, "Dying Inside" [Arctic Music], is a solid slab of fiery Death Thrash/Deathrock with tons of hook and attitude. It's all aggression here.

A touch of Hardcore Punk tinges the Down The Drain sound. Furious guitars and rhythms burn through the silence, as crisp growls rip the dense roar into bloody pieces. This is cataclysmic, and amazing.

Best cuts include the pummeling "Your Demise," "Darker Then," the primal "That Which Will Not Die," and the perfect brutality of "Dying Inside." Down The Drain is ferociously glorious.

In conclusion, Down The Drain is a ferocious wonder among the vicious mediocrity. This band is completely bad-ass. Stay savage. Farewell.

Keep the faith, and the AGGRESSION.
