

Style Council

"Live At Full House"

(ARD Video)

I love a lot of that pop, new wave, sometimes obscure, one hit wonder kind of music of the 80's. Although, not everything that was released during that time was worth checking out...at least in my opinion. Even though I actually remember hearing The Style Council, they weren't a band that got me excited back then and their music certainly doesn't do anything for me now...and sitting through this half hour plus a few odd minutes concert performance wasn't exactly a pleasant viewing experience for me. I think this is one for the hardcore fan...if there is such a thing. Of course, this is was some sort of television program in Germany, if I'm not mistaken. So, the quality is really good. The performance itself was recorded in Hanover back in 1987 and, by the look of the audience, they had a rather large following back then. Those people might wanna pick this one up. You know...honestly...I don't see this release being a huge seller. But, I could be wrong. It's happened before and I'm sure it will happen again. Anyway, if The Style Council is a band that would float your boat in this day and age, click on the link below to pick up a copy for yourself...and, yes, "Money Go Round" and "Shout To The Top" are featured at the tail end of the program. That should excite some of you.
