

FRANCO NEROTM
TEXAS, ADDIO

A man in a grey coat and hat holding a rifle in a Western town. The background shows a stone archway and a building with windows. The man is looking off to the side with a serious expression.

CONTENTS

- 4 Cast and Crew
- 7 Cut to the Action: The Films of Ferdinando Baldi (2018)
by Howard Hughes
- 23 Texas, Adios: Contemporary Reviews
compiled by Roberto Curti
- 26 About the Restoration

TEXAS, ADIOS

1966

CAST

Franco Nero Burt Sullivan
Alberto Dell'Acqua (as Cole Kitosch) Jim Sullivan
José Suarez Cisco Delgado
Elisa Montés The girl
Livio Lorenzon Alcalde Miguel
José Guardiola McLeod
Hugo Blanco Pedro
Luigi Pistilli Hernandez
Gino Pernice Bank employee
Antonella Murgia Burt's mother
Giovanni Ivan Scratuglia (as Ivan Scratuglia) Dick
Silvana Bacci Paquita, the barmaid

CREW

Directed by Ferdinando Baldi
Produced by Manolo Bolognini
Story and Screenplay by Ferdinando Baldi and Franco Rossetti
Director of Photography Enzo Barboni A.I.C.
Camera Operator Gaetano Valle
Edited by Sergio Montanari
Assistant Director Renzo Rossellini
Production Design Eduardo Torre de la Fuente
Art Direction Luigi Scaccianoce
Costumes Giancarlo Simi
Make-up Duilio Scarozza
Stunt Director Remo De Angelis

CUT TO THE ACTION: THE FILMS OF FERDINANDO BALDI

by Howard Hughes

Italian writer-director Ferdinando Baldi created some of the most financially successful spaghetti westerns ever made. In a career that took off in the early 1960s and lasted until the late 1980s, Baldi worked all over the world with some big names. His films are rarely dull and like Antonio Margheriti and Enzo G Castellari, Baldi was successful in a wide range of genres, though mainly in war films and westerns. From David versus Goliath's biblical confrontation and way-out spaghetti westerns, to in-your-face 3-D excitement and Rambo-style superheroics, Baldi was certainly a 'man of action'.

Baldi's first international success was as co-director of the biblical epic David and Goliath (David e Golia, 1960), when he collaborated with Richard Pottier. Ivo Payer was a typical peplum hero as Israelite David, who faced super-warrior Goliath, the Philistines' secret weapon (as played by the towering performer Aldo Pedinotti, billed as 'Kronos'). Orson Welles made a brooding King Saul, in one of his various guest-starring roles that make these outings so enjoyable. It was filmed on location near Zagreb and in Jerusalem in Palestine. Baldi continued in the same vein on further epics and costume adventures, such as Kingdom of Violence (Sfida al re di Castiglia, 1963), The Tartars (Taras Bulba, il cosacco, 1963), starring Vladimir Medar as Taras Tulba, and The Son of Cleopatra (Il figlio di Cleopatra, 1963). Baldi directed Hollywood legend Alan Ladd in Duel of Champions (Orazi e Curiaz, 1961), which told the story of the duel between two sets of brothers, the Horatii and the Curiatii, to settle the war between Rome and Alba. Baldi co-directed this one with future James Bond film director Terence Young. These epics, some of which had considerable budgets and multitudes of extras, demonstrated that Baldi knew how to orchestrate action on a grand scale. But these were strictly formula vehicles, with little sign of Baldi's own stamp.

More interesting were two Roman Empire epics that Baldi directed in Yugoslavia, produced by Moris Ergas – In the Shadow of the Eagles (All'ombra delle aquile, 1966) and Massacre in the Black Forest (Hermann der Cherusker - Die Schlacht im Teutoburger Wald, 1967). Baldi was billed as 'Ferdy Baldwin'. Cameron Mitchell starred in Eagles as Tribune Marcus Ventidius, who battles barbarian hordes in Pannonia, a province in the outer reaches of the Empire. The barbarian tribes unite against the Roman eagle (the battle scenes are impressive, deploying many extras and dangerous stunts), until Ventidius puts down the rebellion and peace is restored. Vladimir Medar played chief Magdo, Beba Loncar was his daughter Helen and Aleksandar Gavric was insurrectionist-in-chief Batone, who tortures Ventidius by making him run across burning coals. In Massacre, Mitchell played Consul Sessina, a lesser role, as the story concentrates on Arminius (Hans Von Borsody) of the Cherusci, once Rome's ally, now its nemesis. The Black Forest massacre (actually the Battle of the Teutoburg Forest) sees the Germanic warriors ambush the legion, which is lost in the marshes. Sessina leads a campaign into Germany across the Rhine and discovers the skeletal remains of the legion, left as a macabre shrine. There's an impressive massed attack by Arminius's army on a Roman outpost, involving a battering ram and fiery oil, which Baldi handles well. Loncar and Medar were back, in different roles, and Antonella Lualdi was Tusnelda, Arminius's woman. Both films, which were obviously shot back-to-back in Yugoslavia, share casts, sets (including a splendid Roman forum set, a wooden Roman fortress and rustic Barbarian camps) and have lovely scores by Carlo Savina. Little seen today, they are set (and filmed) in windswept, wintry hinterlands that are brilliantly evocative of time and place.

Baldi also directed an interesting spy film, Suicide Mission to Singapore aka Goldsnake 'Anonima Killers' (Operazione Goldsnake, 1966). With its suave hero and authentic, exotic location filming in Singapore, this resembles the James Bond films and the 'Kommissar X' spy series that came out around the same time. Iva Zanicchi provides a Bondian theme song, 'Goldsnake'. It's helped by the fact that the production secured the use of a very nice silver E-type Jaguar and a twin-engined British jet fighter, the Gloster Javelin. Less impressively, the villains travel in a VW camper van. 'Stanley Kent'/Stelio Candelli played agent Kurt Jackson, who's on the trail of Professor Wong Li and his secret formula microfilm. Yoko Tani played Annie Wong and Annabella Incontrera was villainess Evelyn. In a superb bit of action, Tani (in leather jacket, crash helmet and goggles) guns down Incontrera and her henchmen with a machine-gun.

A Way-out West

Baldi's grounding in action genres made him a natural for westerns and he made 10 between 1966 and 1981. While he made some textbook tales of revenge and avarice, he also made some of the most bizarre spaghetti westerns too. His debut western, Texas, Adios (Texas, Addio, 1966), was released in Italy at the end of August 1966. Django had been released in the spring of that year and Nero had another western, Lucio Fulci's Massacre Time (Le colt cantarono la morte e fu... tempo di massacre), out the same month. In Texas, Adios, Nero starred as Burt Sullivan, a sheriff who travels with his younger brother Jim from Texas across the border into Mexico, to bring in Cisco Delgado. As in Massacre Time, revenge is complicated by the revelation of unpleasant home truths.

Texas, Adios, the second of Nero's proposed three-picture deal with Manolo Bolognini's BRC Produzione in Rome, has many connections with Corbucci's Django. It was even released as Django der Rächer ('Django the Avenger') in Germany. As well as Nero, several crew members and supporting players reappeared from Django. Enzo Barboni was director of photography, Giancarlo Simi designed the costumes and Remo De Angelis directed the stunts. Gino Pernice, Ivan Scratuglia, Silvana Bacci and Lucio De Santis all appeared in both films. Burt's brother Jim was played by former stuntman Alberto Dell'Acqua, who acted under a variety of names, including Cole Kitosch and Robert Widmark, while chief villain Delgado was the respected Spanish actor José Suarez. The supporting cast included many familiar faces from spaghetti westerns, including Livio Lorenzo and Luigi Pistilli. Baldi filmed in Italy (at Cinecittà Studios' western set), near Madrid (Delgado's stronghold is the crumbling plaza at Nuevo Baztan) and in the iconic landscape of Almería, a region Baldi would revisit in subsequent westerns. The Mexican-flavored score by Spaniard Antón García Abril includes fiestas, a thundering electric guitar 'riding' theme (as horsemen gallop hell for leather down winding Almería canyons), trumpet Deguellos and the sentimental title ballad 'Texas, Addio', sung by Don Powell. This action-packed outing from Baldi also features a subplot of Mexican women being forcibly taken by Delgado's thugs and transported by cart to his hacienda, a kidnapping theme which was developed in Baldi's later westerns. On a purely visual note, the pointed arrow design seen on the Nero and Dell'Acqua's jacket pockets in Texas, Adios also reappears in later Baldi westerns, such as Little Rita of the West (Little Rita nel West, 1967) and The Forgotten Pistolero (Il pistolero dell'Ave Maria, 1969), suggesting a reuse of resources.

Baldi's Little Rita of the West (aka Rita the Kid or The Crazy Westerners) was an unusual musical spaghetti western starring 22-year-old pop singer Rita Pavone as western heroine Little Rita. She shoots it out with outlaws and gunslingers, in parodies of popular spaghetti westerns of the era, including A Fistful of Dollars (Per un pugno di dollari, 1964), For a Few Dollars More (Per qualche dollaro in più, 1965), A Pistol for Ringo (Una pistola per Ringo, 1965), Ringo and His Golden Pistol (Johnny Oro, 1966) and Django. Wedged between these shootouts are a series of pop songs, ballads and 'song and dance' numbers that make this western a unique experience in the genre. Imagine Carry on Cowboy (1965), with songs and Lulu. Baldi concocted the original story and it was again produced by Manolo Bolognini, was photographed by Enzo Barboni, and featured actors that were becoming Baldi's stock company, including Remo De Angelis, Livio Lorenzon, Pinuccio Ardia and Gino Pernice. Terence Hill played Rita's love interest in the film, gunman Blackie aka Black Stan. Hill was then cast as the lead in Baldi's 1968 western Preparati la bara!, an official prequel to Corbucci's Django known variously as Django, Prepare a Coffin, Viva Django! and Django, Get a Coffin Ready. It follows Django Cassedy and his transformation from hired bodyguard to executioner and avenger, when his wife is killed during a gold shipment hold-up. Five years later, Django poses as a hangman to free outlaws who have been framed by the law. The finale has Django facing his enemies in a graveyard and offers a twist on Corbucci's original, by having Django forced to dig his own grave by the villain, until he unearths a coffin (which he'd buried earlier), with his machine-gun hidden inside. Personnel carried over from the original Django included cinematographer Enzo Barboni, co-scripter Franco Rossetti, producer Manolo Bolognini and stunt director Remo De Angelis. Baldi's Hate Thy Neighbor (Odia il prossimo tuo, 1968) was one of the director's lesser works, made with many of the same cast, and on many of the same sets and Italian locations, as Django, Prepare a Coffin. A straightforward revenger, its best moments are imaginative sadism, including hand-to-hand combat in a gladiatorial arena.

Baldi's The Forgotten Pistolero, also known as Gunmen of Ave Maria, demonstrates an emotional power rare in the genre outside the big directorial names. An ambitious melodrama based on the Greek tragedy Orestes, Baldi's adaptation has two gunmen, Rafael (Peter Martell) and Sebastian (Leonard Mann), who were childhood friends, unravelling a murder mystery in the town of Oxaca. Rafael is of lowly peasant stock, while Sebastian has aristocratic blood, but identifying the murderer of Sebastian's father, General Carasco, is key. Though it's primarily a spaghetti western, there's also a fine sense of opulence, bloodlines and aristocratic superiority. Baldi's aided by Roberto Pregadio's score – the magnificent main themes, with its eerie whistle, trumpet and tolling bell, is one of the most famous spaghetti western theme and has been widely reused in TV programming and advertising. The film is worth tracking down for that reason alone. Baldi's most successful western of the period was Blindman (1971), which cost $1.3 million – not a bad budget for a spaghetti – but raked in $15 million worldwide. Tony Anthony starred as a nameless, blind gunfighter, who is hired to escort 50 mail-order brides to Lost Creek, Texas, for the miners working there. In his way are Mexican bandit brothers Domingo and Candy (Lloyd Batista and Ringo Starr), who kidnap the women and take them to Mexico, where their sister Sweet Mama (Magda Konopka) runs a putrid bordello. The spectacular location filming in Almeria makes this a memorably grubby outing.

Fights, Camera, Action!

Following two pretty awful 'Trinity' clones Carambola (1974) and Carambola's Philosophy: In the Right Pocket (Carambola, filotto... tutti in buca, 1975), starring Paul Smith and 'Michael Coby'/Antonio Cantafora, Baldi and Anthony teamed up for a another unique pseudo-western, the genre-hopping Get Mean (1975). The fourth and last of Anthony's 'Stranger' films (following A Stranger in Town [Un dollaro tra i denti, 1967], The Stranger Returns [Un uomo, un cavallo, una pistola, 1967] and The Silent Stranger [Lo straniero di silenzio, 1968]), this one transported Anthony's freewheeling mercenary from the American wild west, through space and time, to war-torn medieval Spain, as he's hired to escort Princess Elizabeth Maria De Burgos (Diana Lorys) back to her native land – for a $50,000 reward, of course. The region is divided by a power struggle between the Moors and the Barbarians, who seek the Treasure of Rodrigo. This is a very different 'western', with superb, authentic Moorish settings and architecture, while the Barbarians, with their beards, braids and horned helmets, resemble Vikings. Many aficionados don't class Get Mean as a spaghetti western, but it's representative of how filmmakers such as Baldi injected something new and fresh into the tired and fading formula.

Baldi and Anthony reunited in the early 1980s for their biggest success, the 3-D western Comin' at Ya! (1981). Anthony starred as HH Hart, whose wife Abilene (Victoria Abril) is kidnapped on their wedding day by two outlaw brothers, Pike and Polk Thompson, played by Gene Quintano and Ricardo Palacios. This trail of revenge plays out like a semi-remake of Blindman, with some spectacular 3-D special effects, and the style appears to have influenced Quentin Tarantino's Kill Bill films (2003-2004). Its success kick-started the 3-D revival of the early 1980s, and it took $12 million in the US alone. Quintano and Anthony later worked together (as director/producer) on the Almeria-shot TV movie Dollar for the Dead (1998) starring Emilio Estevez, which was heavily indebted to spaghetti westerns.

Outside of his westerns, Baldi dabbled in other popular genres. In 1967, before making Little Rita of the West, he directed the 'musicarello' Io non protesto, io amo ('I Don't Protest, I Love'), starring singer Caterina Caselli. She teaches primary school children Roman history via songs, but falls foul of the school's neighbour, Baron Francesco Mari Calò (Livio Lorenzon), who is attempting to court Caterina's widowed mother. Caterina becomes a star thanks to the Baron's cousin, Salvatore (Tiberio Murgia), a record promoter from Chicago, when she ditches her old-fashioned style and becomes a 'Beat' sensation. For a film introduced by a talking ass strolling along a beach, this is pretty entertaining. There are some good songs, including an Italian-language cover of the Walker Brothers' 'The Sun Ain't Gonna Shine (Anymore)'. The film was again produced by Bolognini for B.R.C. Produzione Film, and was picturesquely shot on the stunning Amalfi coast and the ruins at Paestum. Terence Hill, billed under his real name Mario Girotti, was Caterina's love interest, Gabriele, a medical student.

When Baldi directed The Corsairs (I pirati dell'isola verde, 1971), a pirate movie shot in Spain starring Dean Reed and Annabella Incontrera, he adopted the pseudonym 'Ted Kaplan' for the first time. Baldi made an Italian crime film, The Opium Connection aka The Sicilian Connection (Afyon oppio, 1972), which featured Ben Gazzara as an undercover agent (who investigates heroin production and trafficking) and location filming in Turkey. Baldi also directed the giallo Nine Guests for a Crime (Nove ospiti per un delitto, 1977), starring John Richardson, Dana Ghia and Arthur Kennedy, an island-set tale of bed-hopping infidelity, murder and revenge – it's a bit like Mario Bava's Five Dolls for an August Moon (5 bambole per la luna d'agosto, 1970), only better. Both Opium Connection and Nine Guests open with an horrific scene of someone being buried alive. Baldi also directed two very different films set on trains – the sleazy Terror Express (La ragazza del vagone letto, 1980) and the comedy The Travelling Companion (La compagna di viaggio, 1980).

Baldi worked again with Tony Anthony on the 3-D sci-fi/adventure/horror Treasure of the Four Crowns (Il tesoro delle 4 corone, 1983), which opens with a Star Wars-style receding blurb, but is mostly inspired by another Harrison Ford movie, Raiders of the Lost Ark (1981). Anthony played JT Striker, a thieving soldier of fortune who assembles a team of specialists to storm the Temple of the Crowns – a mountain fortress with a sophisticated defence system that is the stronghold of Brother Jonas (Emiliano Redondo) and his death cult of followers – to steal Visigoth crowns. It was shot in Spain and Ennio Morricone provided the up-market score. The lengthy opening sequence features Striker dodging vultures, snakes, dogs, crossbows, skeletons, spears, swords, maces, great balls of fire and other contraptions of death. Like John Wayne, Anthony was at his best wearing a cowboy hat and this film reinforces this.

Baldi's last three films were jungle action movies, in the style of Rambo: First Blood Part II (1985) or Code Name: Wild Geese (Geheimcode Wildgänse, 1986). Baldi wrote and directed them under the pseudonym 'Ted Kaplan'. War Bus (1986) was a variation on John Ford's Stagecoach (1939), relocated to the Vietnam War. A disparate group of missionaries, renegade US Marines and a South Vietnamese major effect a tactical withdrawal to safety in Da Nang through enemy territory in a bright yellow elementary school bus. Innumerable North Vietnamese soldiers get mown down or blown up in this well-photographed shoot-'em-up, which benefits from non-stop action and a good cast, including stuntman Benito Stefanelli as an Australian soldier and Daniel Stephen, Romano Kristoff and Urs Althaus as the tough marines. Baldi followed this with Ten Zan – The Ultimate Mission (Missione Finale, 1988), which was shot on location in North Korea. It featured the illegal trafficking of women, who are then used in DNA experiments trialling deer serum in the creation of the master race (!). Mark Gregory (of Thunder [1983] and 1990: The Bronx Warriors [1990: I guerrieri del Bronx, 1982] fame) was cast against type as the chief villain, with Sabrina Siani (from Ator the Fighting Eagle [Ator l'invincibile, 1982] and numerous other 'Conan' rip-offs) as his sadistic sidekick Glenda. Frank Zagarino and Romano Kristoff go in to rescue the women and blow the laboratories, in another passable action flick with some great hardware (including amphibious personnel carriers) and explosions. Baldi's final film was Just a Damned Soldier (Un maledetto soldato, 1988), which cast Peter Hooten, Mark Gregory, Romano Kristoff and Goffredo Unger as mercenaries in another explosive Far Eastern adventure. This time a mercenary strike force steals a huge shipment of unrefined gold ore from the Superspace industrial complex of millionaire warlord and arms dealer Andrew Tiedemann (Benito Stefanelli) in Cambodia. The strike force is working for the Afghan government, while Hooten's character and Tiedemann are former allies who are now sworn enemies. The mercenaries kidnap Tiedemann's girlfriend, Helen, who switches sides and helps them attack Tiedemann's jungle camp stockade and arms dump. There's a very good synthesizer score by Elio Polizzi, which adds depth to the straightforward action. The 'kaboom!' special effects are often shown twice, for maximum impact. It was shot in the Philippines and these final films prove that when it came to orchestrating action, Baldi was still as good as anyone. When he passed away in 2007, at the age of 80, he left an interesting canon of films that delivers plenty of bangs (and other pyrotechnics) for their bucks.

Howard Hughes writes about film, history and music in print and online. He is the author of a range of film books including Cinema Italiano: The Complete Guide from Classics to Cult and Once Upon a Time in the Italian West: The Filmgoers' Guide to Spaghetti Westerns.

© Howard Hughes/Arrow Video 2018

TEXAS, ADIOS: CONTEMPORARY REVIEWS

Compiled and translated by Roberto Curti

Unshaven, a cold stare, an iron fist and an ultra-fast Colt, Franco Nero is the star in the umpteenth festival of violence, centered on two brothers' revenge against the man who killed their father. Burt and Jim leave Texas and, once they reach Mexico, they immediately find the man they were looking for, the terrible Cisco, who is ruling the land with the law of his gun. At this point, it is clear that the bodies will pile up, saloons will be torn down one after another, and the bad guys will invariably have the worst of it, starting with punches in the teeth. The final twist is that Jim is actually Cisco's son: so, it's just right that both get killed in the end. The film follows faithfully the by-now usual pattern of the Italian western, which, all things considered, allows the viewers, with the same ticket price, to pay for an ever-increasing number of dead bodies on screen.

(Uncredited, Corriere d'informazione, 22 September 1966)

Franco Nero, the star of Texas, Adios, is dubbed by the sweet and menacing voice of Enrico Maria Salerno, who has lent his voice to many grim heroes of the Italian western. But this new character doesn't use it that much when it comes to proving himself: he just needs his guns and fists. So, after cleaning White City, the Texas town where he is the sheriff, he can boldly leave for Mexico. He must punish Delgado (José Suarez), who 20 years earlier killed his father. He will succeed in the final showdown, after silencing the reasons of the heart: among other things, the bandit reveals that he is the true father of the hero's brother Jim. The story, scripted by Rossetti and Baldi, is shot masterfully by director of photography [Enzo] Barboni, in color scope. Director Ferdinando Baldi, who already directed biblical flicks and naïve dramas, carries to its predictable outcome a film once again over-abundant with violence. It should also be noted that, as the villain dies, a new revolution breaks out in Mexico, the ideal start for a new film in the series.

(Uncredited, La Stampa, 2 September 1966)

ABOUT THE RESTORATION

Texas, Adios is presented in its original aspect ratio of 2.35:1 with Italian and English mono audio. Scanning and restoration work was completed at L'Immagine Ritrovata, Bologna. The original two-perf Techniscope 35mm camera negative was scanned in 2K resolution on a pin-registered Arriscan with a wet gate. The film was graded on Digital Vision's Nucoda Film Master at R3Store Studios, London.

Thousands of instances of dirt, debris, scratches, picture instability and other instances of film wear were repaired or removed through a combination of digital restoration tools and techniques. Some instances of picture wear remain, in keeping with the significant restoration challenges presented with the condition of the original elements.

The mono Italian and English language tracks were remastered from the optical sound negatives. The audio synch will appear slightly loose against the picture, due to the fact that the dialogue was recorded entirely in post-production, as per the production standards of the period.

All original materials used in this restoration were accessed from Surf Film.

Restoration supervised by James White.

L'Immagine Ritrovata Simone Arminio, Gilles Barberis, Valeria Bigongiali, Julia Mettenleiter, Alessia Navantieri, Charlotte Oddo, Caterina Palpacelli, Davide Pozzi, Elena Tammaccaro, Giandomenico Zeppa

R3Store Studios Gerry Gedge, Jo Griffin, Andrew O'Hagan, Rich Watson, Jenny Collins

PRODUCTION CREDITS

Disc and Booklet Produced by James Blackford
Executive Producers Kevin Lambert, Francesco Simeoni
Technical Producer James White
QC Manager Nora Mehenni
Subtitling The Engine House Media Services
Blu-ray Authoring David Mackenzie
Design Obviously Creative
Artwork Matt Griffin

SPECIAL THANKS

Alex Agran, Alberto Dell'Acqua, Lars Bloch, Michael Brooke, Federico Caddeo, Stefania Carnevale, Roberto Curti, Chris Edwards, Austin Fisher, Manlio Gomasasca, Kevin Grant, Howard Hughes, C. Courtney Joyner, Michael Mackenzie, Franco Nero, Anthony Nield, Ian O'Sullivan, Henry C. Parke, Jon Robertson, Mike Siegel

FCD1828