

Scanner Zine

Larger than life and twice as natural

SCANNER WEB ZINE - THE PLACE FOR PUNK ROCK, HARDCORE, ANARCHO AND SCUZZY GARAGE ROCK 'N' ROLL

Where Punk Rock is more than a passing fad.

Top Sounds - H

SCANNER HOME PAGE

INTERVIEWS

COLUMNS/ ARTICLES

TOP SOUNDS - INDEX

TV PARTY - INDEX

READING MATTER

TOUR DIARIES

HEY SUBURBIA PODCAST

WEB LINKS

BLOG

MAILING LIST

HANGMEN, THE - Lost Rocks Podcast Played

{Acetate} Imagine a band that embodies the 'Rock 'n' Roll Trinity of R' - that is ROLLING STONES blues swagger, RAMONES relentlessness and REPLACEMENTS attitude-drenched cool - yet also knowing that on any given day RADIO BIRDMAN could challenge any of those bands and come out on top. Well, that band exists in the form of California's THE HANGMEN. The band captures all the arrogance, decadence, danger and sneering cool that every garage Rock 'n' Roll band ever aspired to. This 18 track comp compiles songs from four previous albums plus three unreleased crackers (produced by CIRCLE JERK Keith Morris no less). Highlights? So many: opener 'Blood Red', 'Rotten Sunday', the bludgeon of 'The Devil' and the countrified swagger of 'Can't Stop That Train'. Don't take my word for it; the sleeve is littered with praise for the band from luminaries such as Keith Morris, Mike Ness, Eddie Spaghetti and more. And in vocalist/ guitarist/ leader Bryan Small the band has one of the most laid back, fluid and sneering deliveries you're gonna hear. If the bands mentioned mean anything and THE HANGMEN don't - go get this... NOW. (08.11.11)