TV Party DVD Contest

In 1978, in New York City, two revolutionary trends emerged: public access cable TV and punk rock. Public access was about do-it-yourself television. Punk was about do-it-yourself music. These two phenomena were made for each other and they came together spectacularly in Glenn O'Brien's TV Party.

Billed as "The TV show that's a cocktail party but which could be a political party," this public access hour brought an hour of the wildest of the wild to live television every week.

Now more than 25 years later, BrinkDVD presents the documentary film TV Party, featuring footage from the original show and new interviews of the trend setting participants. BrinkDVD will also release many of the original episodes, beginning with the Premier Show which aired December 18, 1978.

Win a copy of TV Party: The Documentary - The original public access show for NYC hipsters!

Winner will be selected at random from all valid entries.
