Fested: A Journey To Fest 7

Fested: A Journey To Fest 7 DVD (National Underground/Blue Elephant Media/MVD Visual)

Wow! This is not what I expected at all. It's so much better, seriously. I imagined a documentary-type home video that basically consisted of behind-the-scenes hijinks with maybe a few clips of bands playing at a big outdoor stage or something, but this is definitely not that. 'Fested' features some silliness, sure, but finds its focus early and never loses sight of its goal – to document a massive gathering of underground punk and hardcore bands and their fans. Interesting, insightful interviews are interspersed with wacky adventures and lots (and lots and lots) of high quality performance footage from bands such as Hour Of The Wolf (whose cover version of Black Flag's 'Fix Me' is priceless, and not just to see their fully naked guitar player attempt a stagedive at the end of the song), The Fleshies (probably the most underrated band in the history of Alternative Tentacles, and always an amazing live act), American Steel (true bad-asses), The Lawrence Arms, and dozens more. This is a fantastic and eclectic mix of hardcore, pop-punk, and just straight-up US punk bands doing what they do best in front of a huge group of people who truly care. The energy level never drops out of the red, the video and audio quality are as pro as can be, and the well conceived editing ensures an entertaining, enjoyable experience – something of a rarity for music documentaries in days past. The Impaler
