DVD Review - The UndaGrind

N.G Films presents this look at the struggles of artists in the Dirty South to be “heard and respected by the streets”. Looks cheesy but actually it’s 80% better than most “rapumentaries” out there. With dope words of wisdom from the likes of David Banner and Juvenile on how to maintain and come up in the game, to insanely crunk live footage of Pastor John, to live in studio fisticuffs, this shit is entertaining and inspiring.

Shit, these are the shows I wanna see in Vancity, where girls turn around and raise their asses as soon as the Pastor takes the stage, and he ends up in the middle of the floor still rapping hardcore with the fans just grabbing at him. The bottom line is the grind – artists doing the work day and night, selling shit out the trunk. Oh, and the bonus booty shake-off is clearly rigged.
