

historian/screenwriter Lem Dobbs and film historian Nick Redman, and the 1973 made-for-TV remake starring Richard Crenna.

I've stated in the past what a fan I am of the Critical Review documentaries, which take an in-depth look at various bands with critical analysis, plus rare interviews and footage. The latest is the second volume on Queen, covering the period from 1980-1991 (Chrome Dreams, Not Rated, DVD-$19.95 SRP).

One of those certifiable sci-fi classics (so classic it even co-stars The Professor himself, Russell Johnson), This Island Earth (Universal, Not Rated, DVD-$14.98 SRP) gets a newly-remastered release - but criminally, zero bonus features. What's up with that? I want to know how those Metaluna Mutants were made! And what's the deal with releasing this widescreen flick full frame? At the very least, can you finally re-release a special edition of Mystery Science Theater 3000: The Movie, which took aim at the flick?
