"From this I thought it would be a great idea to show people the darker elements of what Cornwall offers to those who live there."

He had a set of photographs ready and Chris had enough footage for an eerie short film.

"From this, I asked Debra, who is a wonderful artist, to create pieces based around my photography and the film, and I think we've created a well rounded exhibition," adds Craig.

See if you agree on May 2 from 7pm when the exhibition, called burnt out. spent. forgotten., comes to The Last Shop Standing, Bretonside bus station in the city.

There you will see ten framed pictures, mounts and a homemade photography book.

There will be also be ten art pieces and Chris' film will be shown a couple of times during the night. The event is free.
