TURBONEGRO- RESERECTION' DVD

Turbonegro embody all the spirit of real rock 'n' roll...there really isn't a band like them...they are unpredictable, dangerous, exciting, original, vulgar and can write songs like a motherfucker. They are out of control.

They are pretty much like a molotov cocktail of the gritty, threatening rock 'n' roll of the Dwarves, Dead Boys, Alice Cooper, Queen, New York Dolls, Bowie, Iggy Pop, GG Allin etc and they mix all this up and crate a blend of rock 'n' roll that's totally erratic and wild. They blend uber-homosexuality with ritualism and ambiguity to create deathpunk. This DVD documents their four year hiatus before their re-emergence at the Quart Festival and, like the band itself, this is wrought with impulsiveness, uncertainty, absurdity, danger and fun. Singer Hank had to leave the band because he felt he was deteriorating and having seeing and hearing hallucinations during being addicted to heroin so moved to a tiny fishing village in Norway to work in a tiny museum in the Summer and doing a radio show in winter...now, as I said Turbonegro are totally unpredictable and more than a touch eccentric so how contrived these stories are I don't know...but I fucking loved this documentary...it's a fantastic piece of rock 'n' roll. I love Hank drinking chilled cod liver oil straight from the bottle, I love seeing a firecracker blow out of his ass, I love that Turbonegro were originally called Nazipenis and I love that it's all so ambiguous. This is a fucking great documentary and it's followed by the Quart festival performance which rules. Turbonegro have re-defined rock 'n' roll for themselves and collected all the sleaze, grit, fun and grime form the past 50 years and let it ferment into something unbelievable and inescapable. I love Turbonegro and this is a totally essential documentary that you need to get ASAP. Fantastic booklet and liner notes too...what a package.
