The Murder City Devils

The End: Final Show Halloween 2001

A lot of bands are great when recorded in a studio setting, but truly shine on stage, performing live. Having never seen The Murder City Devils myself, I can only assume they are just this type of band, with both friends' accounts and now this live show film as my proof. Filmed rather professionally at their last show in their hometown of Seattle, Washington, this documentation of this awesome band captures their intense mixture of punk, rock, country, and a ton of other influences as only a live recording could. Included on the DVD is also a commentary track well worth listening to for a second run through the set, which features pretty much all their hits plus an unreleased, never recorded song. A must for fans.
