Hit Me Baby One More Time and Bands Reunited have demonstrated that some '80s pop acts were better live performers than their video-born reputations would've predicted. For further evidence, there's The Human League's *Live At The Dome (MVD), which documents a typical night on the band's 2003 reunion tour, as original vocalists Phil Oakey, Susan Anne Sulley and Joanne Catherall perform on a sleek set, flanked by electronics. The hits—"Mirror Man," "Human," "(Keep Feeling) Fascination," "Don't You Want Me"—all sound just fine, but the highlight of the show is the obscure track "All I Ever Wanted," which features a glammed-up Oakey, Sulley and Catherall dancing robotically around each other, making the utopian future look surprisingly sexy...
