AMP Magazine - Video Archive For The Ages Vol 2
MVD

Amp magazine has released a second video DVD chalked full of great music. The first half of the DVD contains a lot of harder music with a lot of screaming and that simply doesn't appeal to me. Some of the early faves on this DVD are The Bronx (straight up punk), The Fight (Think Fallout Boy with female vocals) and The Horrorpops (rockabilly that will put Tiger Army to shame). Other than those though the first half fell a bit flat. However, the last portion of this DVD is where it shines starting with track 17, Rufio's "White Lights." Strike Anywhere impressed me the most much due to the fact that I didn't dig them when I first heard them live a year or so ago and this video sold me on them as a good band. Strung Out, The Soviettes, and The Unseen round out the DVD. AMP is a decent magazine with honest writers and we support those guys as much as we can and urge you to do the same by checking out this DVD collection and their magazine at newsstands near you.
