UFO, a name that takes me right back to my long lost, debauched, teenage years. Oh, sweet memories. No drunken, drug and sex fuelled house party was complete until "Doctor, Doctor" had been played at least once.. What do you mean you've never heard of them? They were and are the stuff of rock and roll legend, the band that took Michael Schenker from The Scorpions and made him a household name in his own right. At the height of their fame, their escapades made Motley Crue look like babes in arms and Ozzy like a casual drinker. And they also wrote and recorded some kick ass tunes as well...

I'm guessing that "Too Hot..." is a re-issue (not being as familiar with UFO as I would like to be, hell, that's what two decades of punk rock does to a bloke), as most of the interviews that break up the songs - with those chaps from Def Leppard and Steve Harris from Iron Maiden were filmed in '92, and Phil Mogg, Michael Schenker and Pete Way look way to good (and young) for the footage to be new. Doesn't matter though, as you get nearly ninety minutes of UFO rock classics coupled with the Mogg, Way and Schenker recounting the band's history that's more than worth twenty quid's of anyone's hard earned. Yeah, I'm going to watch this again, crack the volume and pick up my air guitar...it's nearly time for "Doctor, Doctor"...
