

FILM FANADDICT

The Dwarves have long been a staple of the punk rock community and their obnoxious antics are both humorous and commercially off-putting. Their latest DVD release, FEFU: THE DVD centers around the video and making of for their song "Fuck Eat and Fuck you up" from their "Dwarves must die" album. The video features significant amounts of blood and nudity (provided by the Suicide Girls) which are common characteristics of the band. The DVD features an uncut version of the video along with a "censored" version (curiously the same video footage just the vocals are censored) and a lengthy making of featurette. This provides a look behind the scenes producing a video along with lots of filler and displays of antics during the filming. The disc also features several bonus video clips from live performances over the last 10 years which will interest hard core fans. Singer Blag Dahlia has also recently published a fictional novel, "Nina" an unapologetic young girls coming of age story along with a spoken CD companion to the book, "Nina and other delights".
