Flipper - Live!

The baddest band on the planet

There are punk bands, then there are PUNK BANDS, then there's GG Allin. And at the very end of that riotous, drug-addled, mentally unstable road is a bunch of the biggest, baddest, heaviest, slowest and frankly oldest men to still be making brutally intense punk rock (after a fashion) who go by the name of Flipper, and would probably still knife you to death for the last drag on your cigarette.

In the absence of any new material by the foursome (who are probably all clinging on to the last threads of their lives if most of their behaviour over the years is anything to go by) here's a live DVD featuring footage from all that way back at the beginning of the '80's, when they were at their horrible, unholy peak. It's an enormous mess, but the greatness about Flipper was not so much in the genius of their songs as it was in the sheer chaos, anarchy and aggression of their live performances.

Comprising two full sets – one headlining, the other a support show for Throbbing Gristle of about a year apart, the surprisingly excellent picture and sound quality documents their awesome aural attack perfectly. Beware – this is not music for the sane, but it is extremely hideous in a very beautiful way. Make of that what you will, and if you're intrigued, pick up a copy of this record – just remember it comes with a health warning and shouldn't be administered to children, pregnant women, the elderly, adults or humans.
