Tim Buckley — "My Fleeting House" (MVD Visual)

This overdue offering is the first in-depth documentary to focus solely on the words and music of Tim Buckley — arguably one of the most underappreciated talents of the latter 20th Century. The main feature includes modern conversations with frequent Buckley collaborators

John Lennon & Yoko Ono — "Give Peace a Song" (Hip-O/UMe)

It has been almost 38 years to the day (May 26 to be precise) that John Lennon and Yoko Ono installed themselves in a Montreal hotel for their first "bed in."

The story is told by those who lived it. Among the participants offering insights and memories are Tommy Smothers, Petula Clark, André Perry and Yoko Ono herself.

Frank Zappa — Classic Albums: "Apostrophe (')" / "Overnite Sensation" (Eagle Vision)

Led by musical pioneer Frank Zappa, the Mothers of Invention are regaled on this info-laden installment in the "Classic Albums" DVD series.

Under the direction of Frank's son Dweezil — who is also a consummate guitarist in his own right — and vault archivist Joe Travers, viewers are given access to the infamous Utility Muffin Research Kitchen (Zappa's home studio) where several of the album's most prominent songs are deconstructed. This allows for an unprecedented examination into the details and intricacies of classic entries such as "Don't Eat the Yellow Snow."
