

Slip N' Slide: Memorial Day Weekend, Vol. 1
Trick Daddy: Raw & Uncut

Music Video Distributors 2005

This group of videos is some real Dirty South cinema. I immediately had to Swiffer my apartment this shit was so dirty. They should childproof the packaging on these things.

In a nutshell, the flicks are a behind-the-scenes look at what makes the 305's Slip N' Slide Records so damn slick; Trick Daddy, Trina, Duece Poppi aka The Black Richard Nixon and a gang of others just hustlin' and cameo'n.

Trick describes it best: fuckin', suckin', and ecstasy. From in-house recording studios to Club Rollex, besides Miami hip-hop, the common thread in the videos is really fat asses, the kind that would scare most white boys.

Then you see Trick's dad, Charles "Pop" Young, bouncing in the club, a special feature for the American time capsule. Interspersed are cool montages of some craze stuff like street bikes pimped out in fur, and my personal favorite, the Peanut Butter and Jelly Dancers.

In summation, I felt as if I crawled out of a stripper's ass at 7 a.m. by the time I was done with these filthy things.
