Apache Indian & The Reggae Revolution

Time for Change Tour

By Brent Hagerman

It's a good thing Apache Indian knows how to work a crowd, otherwise the "don Rajah" would be overshadowed by his exceptional backing band on this concert footage from the 2006 Musicport World Music Festival. Together with the seven-piece powerhouse band, Apache weaves together roots, ragga and bhangra, obviously revelling in this cross-cultural fusion of his own creation. Whether it's giving the audience Punjabi lessons during "Movie Over India," leading the crowd in the "Om Numah Shivaya" mantra, showing off some authentic Ragamuffin Bhangra in the ridiculously hip "Hey Baba," letting Indian percussionist Gubzy get absolutely wild on "Gubzy's Freestyle Dholblast" or trekking down Jamaica way for a fun, if slightly loose, tribute to Desmond Dekker in "Israelites," Apache Indian's live show sizzles. On A Mission

After getting in on the ground floor of hardcore punk, Washington, DC's Bad Brains have forged a career that has been plagued by stops and starts, though their long-term influence is nothing less than seminal. Since they first appeared in the late '70s, Bad Brains have broken sound barriers with the... Read More

Pig Destroyer - Phantom Limb

Despite the fact that Terrifyer seemed insurmountable, being one of the most highly acclaimed records of 2004, the underground's grind-defying darlings Pig Destroyer have yet again managed to up the ante and take their game to the next level. This daunting task was consummated through the fin... Full Review

The Hot Springs

Montreal's Hot Springs proved to be the epitome of awesomeness in their Friday night performance at the Comfort Zone. Easily delivering the festival's most impact and giving me a new favourite rock act, the band's consummate showmanship and ferocious energy was unparalleled. With a... Full Review
