The Director's Cut

This was so long they had to use 2 DVD'S. For good reason with some of the song lengths this band has ha ha. Anyway this band has been around for a long time and what we have here is a 2003 video from the bands 35th anniversary World Tour. You get footage from 2 different shows across the sea and there is some added stuff that only appeared before in edited form. The band sound tight as balls and the camera work is incredible on this puppy. The band rip through some of their best known tunes such as: I've Seen All Good People, Roundabout, etc. I was never a huge fan of the band, but in the last few years I have had a deeper admiration for them and some of their music. This clocks in at about 200 minutes so anybody that buys this well be getting more than their moneys worth. This also features the 'classic line-up" and since they are presently not together, you get to see this band do their thing and on this they do it quite well. Any fan of classic rock needs this in their DVD collection right now. Info: <http://www.mvdb2b.com>
