Die Pretty lead vocalist and bassist Sarah Orloff is an up and coming rockstar from New York. Pulling double duty in a band, she needs a trustworthy bass so she can concentrate on her singing. Read on to see why the Fender Precision Lyte bass guitar is Sarah Orloff's top choice.

What one piece of equipment do you use to obtain your signature sound?

Sarah: I use a Fender Precision Lyte Bass in candy apple red. It has EMG pickups as well.

What about it makes it so important to you?

Sarah: Well since it's the Precision Lyte model, it's not heavy, so it makes playing live easier. Also it has a big full sound for a lighter model guitar.

What are the major pros and cons?

Sarah: It's fast playing, durable and light. I love it, no complaints.

How long have you used this piece of equipment and would you ever change it?

Sarah: I've been playing this bass for the past few years. I also have one in the sunburst color. I occasionally switch up the colors, but I'll definitely be sticking with this particular model.

Any final thoughts or comments on the gear?

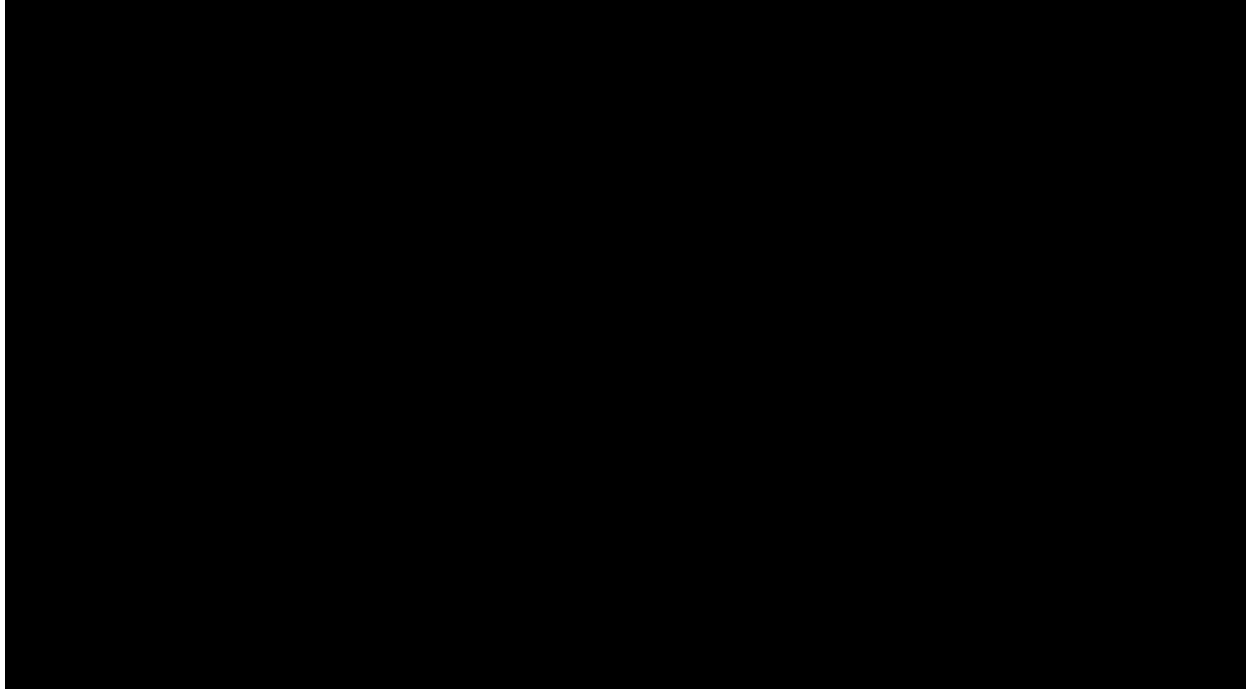

Sarah: I've always played with Fender Basses since I was a kid. I love the Precision model and will be sticking with this guitar for awhile. I wish I had one in every color actually!
