May last year I had the pleasure of reviewing a great little 3 track Ep, Battle Over Brooklyn, (link here) by a pop / punk outfit from the USA, Die Pretty. I remember being quite impressed by what I heard and was eager to get the opportunity to review their full length album when it was released. Skip forward almost 12 months and the wait is over, here is that debut album, Beyond Fate.

The album features 19 three minute punk workouts, (all be it with a healthy pop edge to them!), during which the band really do showcase their song writing talents.

Whats amazing is that despite having 19 tracks the album maintains a fresh feel to it throughout, Sarahs vocals sitting comfortably on top of the great musical muscle of the band. The songs are all solid, with a few sure fire hits (should they get the airplay and backing that they deserve!), with a mixture of themes, tempos and atmospheres.

This is a solid debut album, and whilst not really breaking any new ground, Die Pretty do what they do really, really well.

Stand out tracks include ,
Medicated Nation,
My Own Mind,
Voices,
Out Of this Mess,
Let Me Out and Boys and Girls.

These guys have the songs and talent to go a long way, maybe even break into the mainstream and be the next Green Day or Blink 182. A great album well worth checking out when its released on May 6th!
