

<http://www.moviecitynews.com/reviews/DVD/2008/081125.html>

Anyone with a passing interest in Hollywood gossip knows Kate Hudson is the daughter of Goldie Hawn. How she acquired the surname, Hudson, is less known, though. Bill Hudson, the long-ago husband of Goldie, was one-third of a brother act that enjoyed some popularity in the mid-1970s. (Their polyester clothes and silly hairdos wouldn't have been tolerated in any other decade.) The Hudson Brothers Razzle Dazzle Show was a variety show that CBS imported from Toronto and stuck on its prime-time schedule as a summer replacement show. Fast-paced and colorful in a groovy, psychedelic sort of way, Razzle Dazzle was moved to the network's Saturday-morning kiddie ghetto, which is where it found a more logical home. The best-known character probably was Rod Hull's nasty emu puppet.

- Gary Dretzka