Despite being a die-hard TV viewer for my entire childhood, I have absolutely no recollection of The Hudson Brothers Razzle Dazzle Show, a 1974-1975 Saturday morning variety series that featured the easy-pop brother act in songs and sketches. I've never heard of Video Service Corp either, but the apparently Canadian-based DVD company has released the entire network run of the show on a three DVD set which features the brothers – Bill, who later fathered Kate Hudson, Mark, who worked with Aerosmith and Ringo Starr, and Brett, now a TV producer – singing and cutting up with an impressive cast of TV comedy vets, including Murray Langston (the Unknown Comic), Billy Van from The Hilarious House of Frightenstein, Gary Owens, Peter Cullen (the voice of Optimus Prime!) and Rod Hull, who freaked out many a TV host with his puppet Emu.
