"The Life After Death Project"

A "Paranormal" Bio Film

Amos Lassen

Death is, without question, our greatest enigma. Filmmaker Paul David brings us four New York Times best-selling authors, three science professors and three respected mediums who take a look at death by investigating evidence of "After Death Communication (ADC) from Forrest J.

Ackerman. The film hears from those who are spiritual and from skeptics via chemistry labs and computer software that provides a way to speak to the dead. It all began with a small incident that became a big issue and is the story of the afterlife of Ackerman who was one of the founders of movie science-fiction and who refuses to remain quiet, even after death.

The DVD will be available to all after its TV debut this month on the Sci-Fi channel when it will be release in a two disc set containing both the original and its sequel. Ackerman, himself, was a skeptic about life after death but he told friends that if he was wrong in this, he would let them know by sending them a note from "the other side" and in this documentary, we see what happened. You must see this to believe it.

In the DVD version, we get the sequel to the film entitled "Personal Encounters" which contains "spellbinding accounts of personal encounters with life after death from archaeologists, physicists, a retired colonel, a librarian, clinical psychologist, sales executive, publisher and doctors and nurses who have worked with hundreds of dying patients. They have seen souls leaving the body at death, angelic beings, spirit entities, golden orbs, physical manifestations and more. It includes updates on the continuing saga of the Forrest J Ackerman case".
