My Breakfast With Blassie (1983)

Filmed in 1983, Andy Kaufman and wrestling legend Fred Blassie, self-proclaimed King of Men and coiner of the phrase "pencil-necked geek," meet for breakfast and discuss wrestling, hygiene, stardom and whether to eat bacon or sausage. This film offers insight into the state of mind of Kaufman before his fatal cancer diagnosis, which some people to this day think was a hoax. Kaufman was memorably portrayed by Jim Carrey in the Milos Forman biopic Man On the Moon, which focused on Kaufman's career and life, including his later obsession with professional wrestling.
