

"My Breakfast with Blassie"

Two guys meet for breakfast at a Los Angeles diner. They discuss ordinary subjects like the pros and cons of pancakes. Then some women at a nearby table ask for their autographs, and the fun starts. One of them is Andy Kaufman, TV star and subversive provocateur. The other is Freddie Blassie, pro wrestler and opinionated man's man. Neither likes having their meal interrupted to sign autographs, and they aren't shy about saying so. This improvised, 60-minute video performance art from 1983 is a must-have for fans of Kaufman's experimental satire. DVD extras: lost footage, home movies, a making-of featurette, a photo gallery and film premiere footage. From VSC. www.videoservicecorp.com.

- Chris Ball