Demon Divas and The Lanes of Damnation

Demon Divas and The Lanes of Damnation is a homage to the 80s horror-comedies that often went straight to VHS owes a lot to Sorority Babes in the Slimeball Bowl-O-Rama, sharing cast member Brinke Stevens and even using the same names for major characters. Demon Divas is set in a bowling alley, which is owned by five female demons. The plot is fairly basic with two nerdy bowling alley employees, the in-control Lisa and the naive Taffy, being tormented by members of the sorority which rejected them. Between the leader of the sorority and Lisa, there's a romantic rivalry over good looking fraternity bookworm, Johnny Carson. The demons grant Taffy and Lisa a wish and events no longer go to plan as the main characters are now demons.

Most of the 80s requisites for teen horror and comedies are used with the actors playing younger than their age, female characters stripping most of their clothes off (in a game of strip bowling in this movie), a lesbian pool scene and condiments over the head. As the clothes come off, the number of tattoos gives away that this definitely isn't an eighties movie. The side characters of obnoxious stoner, Budnick and the innocent pinboy are closer to 90s characters, Jay and Silent Bob. There's also a quirky trio of book club of demon hunters who have held their latest meeting in the bowling alley.

Those seeking nudity will be disappointed and those seeking gore will find a little towards the end
