

For those whose appetite for depravity and bloodlust knows no bounds, the gentle folks at MVD Visuals have released a slew of micro-budget, do-it-yourself thrillers: “Hellweek: Grindhouse Bootleg Edition,” “Demon Divas and the Lanes of Damnation,” “The Resurrection Game: 10th Anniversary Edition,” “Lust for Vengeance: 10th Anniversary Explicit Version” and “House of the Damned.” Among the many “highlights”: in addition to the fresh original cut of “Hellweek,” there’s a grind-house version “with all the dirt, filth and scratches from 42nd Street”; in “Demon Divas,” scream queens help a pair of nerdy college girls get even with their tormenters ... at a bowling alley; “The Resurrection Game” imagines a society in which zombies are merely a nuisance and cogs in a much large conspiracy; “Lust for Vengeance” ... sex, drugs and a serial killer; and in the “House of the Damned,” Mommie Dearest harvests the youth of her daughter. – Gary Dretzka