

REALM/Endless War
(Metal Mind Productions-originally released by Roadracer)

This is more thrashy than the band's other release, which is reviewed above.

The band have a more bay area crunch with clear vocals on this release. I like both, but prefer this one. This band can rip out the thrash riffs with the best of them and in no time was my neck snapping and getting into this baby big time. This is real thrash not that nu-metal Oz fest crap. It is great that these releases are seeing the light of day so that a new generation of fans can enjoy this godly music. Info:
