Ian Hunter Band feat. Mick Ronson - Live At Rockpalast (MIG)

Can you find a more legendary shows than this? Ian Hunter teams up with Mick Ronson for a spectacular performance in Essen, Germany, in 1980. For years, this was gem on the trading circuit, as there was no official releases from this particular duo. It is finally made available, and it's simply a must to own.

Ian Hunter is in his prime here, as is Mick Ronson, and they truly create a magic on stage. It's a very electrifying performance, and even though it was recorded in 1980, it has that 70s vibe all over. Hunter of course continue to make great records, tours, and even managed to reform Mott The Hoople for a few shows. Mick Ronson is of course sadly missed since his passing in 1993. Keeping that in mind, this is one of a kind document, as the pairing between these two players is now impossible.

Once again, Rockpalast, documents history, and now it's available beyond Germany, where the show is based at. It's a shame there aren't more shows like that around the world. And we, the music fans, couldn't be more thankful for shows like that. Your contribution to music is priceless, just as are all these shows that are now surfacing.
