Sirrah: Did Tomorrow Come

Fairly typical Polish goth-esque metal with lots of cool ideas but little sense of how to contain them. The vocals go this way and that, the guitars emerge and disappear in this track and the other without any real strong sense of reason; the songs aren't really songs as much as they are atmospheric explorations. Sure, that kind of chaos worked for the likes of Voivod and it kind of works here, though it can be frustrating at times. Check out "Patron," "Lash" and "High Treason" to hear this band at its best.
