Yattering

Live Extermination

Metal Mind Productions

www.metalopolis.pl

Yattering have long been one of my favorite bands. Over the years they have quietly taken their place alongside such insane metal icons as Suffocation and Cryptopsy. For some reason I will never understand they remain one of extreme metal's truly underrated bands. I haven't heard Yattering much lately so I was very excited when this live album landed in my mailbox in the first wave of Poland's Metal Mind Productions releases here in the U.S.

Live Extermination was recorded in Krakow, Poland in 2000 so it features older material. Regardless it's as potent as it is today, offering more than a little proof that the band found their calling very early on in their career. The album is of exceptional quality considering what most extreme live albums sound like. This one is very professional sounding and the band sound raw and brutal and huge and cryptic all at the same time. Some of the highlights here include "The Murderer," "Dittohead," and, of course, "Life For Life."

I have always wondered if Yattering could pull their sound off live and this CD answers that question with a resounding "Hell Yeah!" Fans waiting for something new will find a lot of classics to chew on here.
