

RPWL The rpwl experience.
Metal Mind Productions

This concert was performed at the Wyspianski Theatre in Katowice where RPWL headlined on the second day of the prog rock festival. This is melodic prog rock which rarely pushes any boundaries. That is not a criticism, their mellow sound is finely tuned and they put on a polished performance. The lead singer reminding me, looks wise, of a younger Steve Hogarth from Marillion. The DVD is a good record of the performance, nothing outstanding, but allowing us to see the band playing without any photographic tricks.

The concert starts with some of their most popular numbers "Hole in the Sky" "Breathe in, Breath out" and "3 Lights". Humour is there as well, especially in "This is not a prog song" which includes a short cover of Status Quos "Rocking all over the World". The main set ends with the stirring "Roses" Two tracks make up the encore, and there are various "extras" including an interview with band members a photo gallery, desktop images, and more. An enjoyable collection of this German bands catalogue.
