Singer-songwriter Melissa Ferrick is out with a new music video called "Home" that debuts exclusively on Speakeasy. The track is off of her just-released album "the truth is" (MPress Records), a very personal effort which the veteran artist wrote, produced and arranged herself. The Americana-flavored album has a wide range of geographic influences: it was recorded in Boston, mixed in Alabama, and mastered in Nashville. "Home" is a quiet track, but it's anything but gentle—there are powerful emotions flowing beneath the calm surface like an undertow. The new video was directed and edited by Nick Clark.

Watch the video. What do you think?
