SOLOS: The Jazz Sessions is a music performance series profiling legendary artists such as Lee Konitz, Gonzalo Rubalcaba, Andrew Hill, and many more. Each episode features complete musical pieces, insightful interviews and behind-the-scenes footage. Lee Konitz is one of the most individual of all alto saxophone players, the cool-toned musician has always had a strong musical curiosity that has led him to consistently take chances and stretch himself, usually quite successfully, as his six tracks will attest. Afro-Cuban jazz figure from the '90s, Gonzalo Rubalcaba is an extraordinarily versatile pianist able to blend disparate strands of Cuban and American jazz traditions into a fresh, modern whole. Rubalcaba delivers five cuts that display his remarkable sensitivity toward the musical traditions from which he emerged. Andrew Hill is recognized as a great composer and pianist. His complex tunes exhibited sophistication, born of mastery, not chance or contingency. Check out his four slices of genius!
