With a title of Ding Dong Dead, you can probably already guess what this movie is about. We've all heard of the not-so-nice game that kids play called ding dong ditch where you ring a doorbell and run away before they people can answer it, just to annoy the living daylights out of them. But most of us grow out of that, hopefully before you're out of your teens. What happens though when grown women get bored and decide to pull pranks on a neighborhood man?

Doug (Luke Y. Thompson) got fired from his job, so he spends all day at home daydreaming about the woman across the street, Claudia (Elina Madison), and trying to find a new job, but not too hard. In the middle of this job search, he decides to go to the nearest convenience store for a cold beverage. On his way back, there are two random women dressed in all black walking down the middle of the street. move. Obviously, they're not planning on moving or they wouldn't be walking in the street in the first place. Anyway, when he turns the corner to get home and he's finally free of them, he gets to his driveway and finds a group of like 10-15 dressed in solid black blocking his driveway so he can't even park. They finally let he can get into the house. Doug decides that the best thing to do would be to ca on them. This simple act starts a war between Doug and the D.D. crew.

The D.D. crew are quite organized and get the best of Doug at the beginning sprayed with silly string, then egged and sprayed with a water hose. Things go l when one of the women, D.D. Dana (Megan Frances), drops dead after an argu D.D. Dahlia (Tara Strand). When D.D. Dahlia gets back to the group, she say doesn't know what happened to D.D. Dana. Apparently when Doug comes to, he the dead body in the yard. When they torment him again the next morning thoug and finds the dead body in his backyard and totally loses it. He thinks that he kill starts going on a murderous rampage killing all of them that he can find with w can find. It's really quite amusing actually, the gratuitous violence. He even use trap! Can Doug stop before they're all dead? Will he go too far?

The DVD also has a bonus behind the scenes featurette which is short, but an mainly the cast and Creep Creepersin (writer and director) talking about the movi role in it. It does give you some additional insight into how the story came about a beginning of Ding Dong Dead is a bit slow while Doug is lying around fantasizing it picks up and gets going, it's a bit more interesting. It's not meant to be the w deep movie ever created, but it is entertaining. I'm not sure I can see repeat wat if you're looking for some mostly mindless entertainment, check out Ding Dong D
