3Triple Threats of Terror is a three way split from three horror rock/ punk bands from across the country. They are bands who have been around for many years helping keep this genre alive. With very few exceptions I usually shy away from horror music due to its similarities and complete ripping off of the Misfits.

First up is Creepersin. They play slow rock/ rockabilly horror themed music. His vocals seem at least a little influenced from Danzig. He's got a deep voice similar to Danzig but definitely not exact. The music ranges from really slow rock to an upbeat punk song. Personally this was a terrible way to start the record as this was my least favorite band on the record. The music is really boring to me as I prefer something upbeat and catchy and this was neither.

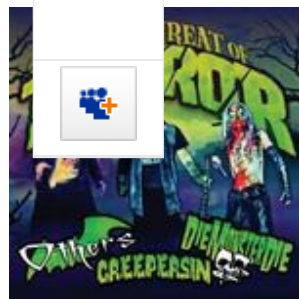

Next up is DieMonsterDie from Salt Lake City. This band sound like a mix between new Misfits and old Misfits and a little bit of the Dwarves. Unfortunately it doesn't come off as catchy or entertaining as the Misfits. The vocalist fits with the music but I just wasn't into him at all. The music although being upbeat and well written, was boring and not entertaining at all. It did have a few cool parts to it and was my favorite on the record. "Lucky Number 666" was actually a really good song but it is unfortunate that the other songs weren't as catchy and fun.

Last up are Others from NY. They actually play an old school style of punk rock. It is nice to hear something a bit different than the normal horror punk sound or rockabilly sound. The vocals are a typical 80's punk band style. Although they were different the songs on here were not good to me.

Overall this album did nothing for me. This genre usually doesn't spawn anything but Misfits clones. Of course there are bands that do their own thing and write great music unfortunately I don't feel like this a collection of anything that. Fans of horror punk will probably love this record and probably already know these bands.
