Planet of the Vampire Women

Planet of the Vampire Women

Production Year: 2012

Release Date: 04/24/2012

Collection Number: 1043

Planet of the Vampire Women is a complete throwback to the 50's/60's sci-fi b-movies! It's very self-aware which is typically something I do not enjoy, but this one must have something right because I had a great time with it.

The film is about a group of glorified space pirates who in the midst of a space-casino heist end up on the run from the law. The group crash lands on a near by moon, the crash fatally wounds the captain, but surprise surprise she ends up returning as one of the undead and also has an insatiable lust for blood.

I think you get the gist of it. Breasts, blood, and hammy acting. The captain slowly infects scantily clad space pirate after scantily clad space pirate leading us to the ultimate finally...More blood, and more boobs. The CGI is awful, the creatures look like they stepped out of a GWAR concert, did I mention the CGI? All of this makes for a hilariously entertaining movie. Don't get me wrong, this one's not taking home any Oscars...Or any Rondos for that matter, but it still ends up being a highly entertaining movie.

The DVD is completely bare bones, strike one. Us DVD collectors enjoy our content! This being an independent film set in space with tons of costumes, I can imagine a lot went into the production...It would have been nice to see a making of or something similar. But hey, the most important part is the film right?

Now to rant a little. I'd really like to see a film like this that isn't self-aware. A lot of these "B movies" were directed by guys who thought they were making Gone With The Wind in space...I'd like to see that attitude brought back. If you're going to make a film in that mold, why not try using the same SFX that were available during that time period...That's something I'd get a kick out of.

Anyhow, I enjoyed Planet of the Vampire Women and I think you will too, so give it a shot!
