

Independent Flicks

Independent movies from far and beyond

Thursday, 26 July 2012

Review: Zombie A-Hole (2011)

First I'd like to thank Dustin Mills for providing me with a screener of his movie. Zombies exist, and a whole underworld of nasty beings is hinted at. Need a little magick (that's magic with a k) to help you out? No problem... stop over at Voodoo Bob's trailer and pick yourself up something nice. Shrunken heads? Hell... he's got a whole shrunken man. This is the story of a religious cowboy, a lost soul, and a beautiful grease monkey fixing to exact bloody vengeance on the same son-of-a-bitch. He's a low-down, dirty, disgusting, depraved, sadistic, psychotic, hell bent, grade F, Zombie A-Hole and he ain't gonna know what hit him! Zombie A-Hole is written, produced and directed by Dustin Mills. The acting is uneven it isn't too bad. The camerawork and editing is okay but keep in mind that this was made on a very tight budget. The soundtrack is very good. It's gory, much of it it is computer gendered and some of it are quite simple practical make-up-fx and feels a bit cartoonish but I think this is a intentional choice as well as due to the evidently very limited budget. I do like the design and look of the zombieified Pollux and while the the resurrected skeletons are in tone with the cartoonish style they look very plastic and that's probably due to the fact they are made of plastic... There is plenty of female T & A including full frontal nudity. This review based upon a online screener provided by the director.

Rating: 4 out of 7. I enjoyed it, sure it has some flaws but take for what it is, a ride in a cartoonish magic world next to our boring reality and you'll probably enjoy it also.

/JL

Posted by Daydreamer at 20:06

Recommend this on Google

Labels: Zombie A-Hole \(2011\)

No comments:

Post a Comment

By using this icon on my website I am stating... 1. That I am opposed to the use of corporate advertising on blogs. 2. That I feel the use of corporate advertising on blogs devalues the medium. 3. That I do not accept money in return for advertising space on my blog./JL

MOVIE PIRACY
- IT'S A CRIME.
DON'T BUY INTO IT.
REPORT IT!

Fuck
The Mainstream

2

Search This Blog

On this blog you won't find mainstram Hollywood movies, everyone already knows that shit. The purpose of this blog is to give space to the often overlooked films that needs exposure and recognition.

Daydreamer

