

"dUg" Pinnick wants to know what you gonna do and make you sick.

It's no secret I'm a fan of King's X. I've been eagerly awaiting the follow up to their fantastic 2008 disc XV, but as with most of the really good bands, they don't make much money and therefore wait a long time between albums. However, the three members of the band are really prolific artists on their own and have released solo albums in that time. Apparently, lead vocalist/bassist Doug (styled "dUg") Pinnick has a new album coming out called Naked sometime in the next... whenever. And as such, he's released a track from that album called, "What You Gonna Do?" in the form of a self-filmed music video.

And when I say self-filmed, I mean it's himself holding a camera to himself while he lip syncs the words and spins around the room. It's all a little too nauseating for my tastes and it makes me wonder just how high dUg was when he filmed it (the man is a well-known fan of the ganja). The song isn't half bad though. Like most of his stuff, it's got some heaviness to it, some groove, and while not the greatest thing ever, it is pretty fun. Check out the vid below and be on the lookout for Naked sometime in the future.
