In Heaven There is No Beer (DVD)

Here is a documentary about the punk rock scene in Los Angeles in the 2000s. More specifically, the film features the music scene of Kiss or Kill which wanted to be an alternative to the Sunset Strip clubs which were forcing the bands to pay for play. This promotion was active between 2002 and 2007 with a real family atmosphere, having at the height of its popularity up to 100 bands on its roster and over 1,000 loyal fans. You could see perform among others talented bands like King Cheetah, The Dollyrots and Bang Sugar Bang. Unfortunately, Kiss or Kill ended up being a victim of its popularity and fell into the trap it tried to fight at its beginning. The documentary of nearly 90 minutes is very well done with concert footage for many groups and excerpts from interviews with members of these bands, fans and specialists of the local music scene. As a bonus, the DVD contains over 30 minutes of additional material including deleted scenes, live performances and a photo gallery along with director's commentaries.
