BRYAN LOVES YOU:

JAL Switthtown LLC

In the early 1990s, a 32-year-old psychotherapist (Seth Landau) began to suspect that his small Arizona community was being taken over by a homicidal religious cult known as "The Bryans." His entire ordeal was captured on camcorder footage and security tapes. They are the video musings of a highly disturbed young man. This is the footage that was recovered. George Wendt, Tony Todd, Tiffany Shepis and Daniel Roebuck co-star along with cameos by Lloyd Kaufman, Chuck Williams, Bobby Slayton and scream queen Brinke Stevens, in this disturbing chiller based on the 1993 true story that shocked America. Seth Landau says: "Bryan Loves You is my take on the dangers of homogenous thinking, and also a very personal story about my experience growing up in rural America and being forcibly admitted to a mental hospital as a child."

WAKING UP IN THE MORNING TO GOOD MUSIC

"Wake up, everybody, no more sleepin' in bed. No more backward thinking, time for thinking ahead..."

I have an alarm that goes off every morning to the sound of Harold Melvin and the Blue Notes doing "Wake Up Everybody." If that doesn't wake you up, you're probably not waking up that morning. I am always glad to hear good old Melvin every morning.

THE BEATLES LOVE OF GOOD OLE SOUL MUSIC

Growing up in the '60s and '70s, The Beatles were definitely at the top of my list. It was a definite Beatles Generation. Two great songs by the Fab Four included "Money" (That's What I Want) and "Can't Buy Me Love." However, I eventually discovered that both these hits and another "Twist and Shout" were great old R&B hits, too. The other day I heard Barrett Strong singing "Money" and the Contours doing "Can't Buy Me Love." The Beatles did a good job on those two hits of theirs but the Soul versions of both are much better.

MANCHIN'S FUTURE

IN THE U.S. SENATE

While Biden sounded like Douglas MacArthur when it came to the Ukrainian people or as he called them "Iranians," he promised little more than lip service when it came to concepts like freedom. He attempted to make us believe things aren't really as bad as we think they are at home. Nothing like urging Congress to throw another $2 trillion into the wind.

While Democrats sitting in the House chamber together chanted support for all things Biden, U.S. Sen. Joe Manchin, D-WV, sat on the Republican side of the House chamber with little affect and no clapping. What Joe Manchin will do is up to him. Obviously, he felt more comfortable sitting away from the Democrats in the chamber. Will he remain a Democrat or switch parties is clearly up to him and him alone.

Manchin is a wild card going into the midterms. Democrats seem ready to kick him out of their caucus but do they understand by doing so they are kicking themselves?

ANNUAL CABIN FEVER PARTY IN WHITMAN

As we get closer and closer to the return of Daylight Savings Time — don't forget to "spring ahead" over the weekend for more sunlight in the afternoons. Remember Saturday night before you retire for the night to push those clocks (if you still have one) forward one hour.

This is probably why a few weekends back the Veterans Brotherhood hosted its Annual Cabin Fever Party on January 26th down at the Whitman VFW Post. The proceeds raised all went to a good cause helping veterans, service members, and their families in the local area.

Winchester Republican Anthony Amore sought more governmental transparency when he ran back in 2018 for secretary of state. Here we are four years later and he is still pushing the same issue as he just launched his campaign for state auditor in a race pretty much dominated by Democrats Chris Dempsey and State Sen. Diana DiZoglio. Amore was here in East Boston several years ago when he gave a lecture at the East Boston Branch Library speaking about his then new book on the Gardner Museum Heist from years ago over in the Fenway.

REMEMBERING TEENA MARIE?

She was a great singer from back in my younger days. Did you know that Motown's Berry Gordy thought so too and she was one of Motown's first white female singers? She had a great soulful voice and belted out some great music ... Speaking of Motown, did you know that the singer Rockwell who sang "Somebody's Watching Me" back in 1984 was actually the son of Berry Gordy. He wanted to make it on his own and did.
