AMERICAN SPEEDWAY - "Ship of Fools"
(Prophase Music/MVD)
Official American Speedway Myspace

American Speedway are a treat for anyone who misses the glory days of Punk/Rock'N'Roll legends such as The Wretched Ones, Gas Huffer, The Humpers, and Supersuckers. With a diehard work ethic and a unquenchable thirst for Pabst Blue Ribbon, these guys won't take "No" for an answer when it comes to kicking ass on stage or having a good time off stage. With song titles like "Drinkin' and Drivin' " and "Cocaine", it's not hard to tell what these dudes are all about. Even if getting whiskey bent and hellbound isn't quite your thing, it's almost impossible not to get moved by the infectious Rock'N'Roll contained on "Ship of Fools" that harkens back to the days of listening to shitty dubbed Memorex cassette tapes of the bands I mentioned earlier with your grease ball friends as you pooled up your money for a twelve pack of Schlitz and a dimer of some ghetto swag to complete the experience. Damn, I miss those days, and the only thing that keeps the flame of my younger days burning is hearing new bands and music that reminds me why I never just tuned in to FM radio and did my homework, because that sucks. Yes, American Speedway make me feel like a kid again, going to house shows and puking up a few beers in order to make room for more, and then going to work the next morning to make a little cash to do it all over again. If you like it raw and dangerous, pick up a copy of "Ship of Fools" . I promise you'll like it.
