Review

With epithets pouring out of Blaze's mouth, this is a crunchy batch of hard metal goodness. The menacing image of the ex-Motorhead frontman in 1988 on the Live Fast Die Fast album is in line with the Metalmania festival. The video is impressive and the DVD has er flamish yellow with the rest of the group on the dynamic cover of this DVD just one case in point. Metal Mind Productions and MVD give Bayley the star treatment, and he deserves it, a colorful eight page insert is chock full of photos of bandmates Rich Newport on guitar, second guitarist Nick Bermudez, David Bermudez on bass and Rico Banderra on drums. Sometimes the band runs away with the music, as on Two Worlds Collide, which could be the musicians playing on two different planets on that collision course, but since attitude and feeling is what this genre is all about, the chaos works to Blaze Bayley's advantage. That tune is also on 2003's As Live As It Gets from the band Blaze, totally different set of musicians from this outing, and an album with less than half of the songs overlapping due to the fact that Bayley has a very deep catalog. He calls the band "incredibly sexy", but the fact is the lead vocalist could be a sad cross between Meatloaf and Lemmy from Motorhead, definitely a frightening thought...you wouldn't want to meet him in a dark alley, and that ominous and imposing look lends itself quite well to the music generated by this crew. "Kill And Destroy" smashes out of 2002's Tenth Dimension album as do two other titles from this fifteen song set, opening number "Speed of Light" and that "Tenth Dimension" disc's title track. Metal Mind does a super job with these DVDs and this package contains an interview with Blaze, an interview with the band, photo gallery, desktop images and all sorts of goodies including the bonus video "Hollow Head". The rock veteran has a fan base in Europe but this project has the potential to expand his following exponentially.
